Information on withdrawal of retirement pension

In Norway, ordinary retirement age is the month after you turn 67. If you meet the conditions for being granted a Norwegian old-age pension, you will therefore always be able to withdraw 100% of it from the month after you turn 67.

Norway also has an option called 'flexible withdrawal of retirement pension from the age of 62'. This means that if you have had high enough earnings, you can draw a pension from the month after you turn 62. You can read more about what 'high enough earnings' means under the heading 'choice of withdrawal time - higher pension the longer you wait'.

Choice of withdrawal rate

- You can choose how much of the pension you want to take out, at the following withdrawal rates: 20, 40, 50, 60, 80 or 100%.
- If you have a withdrawal rate between 20 -80% you can change this rate once a year. However, you can always choose to change the withdrawal to 100% (provided you have high enough earnings) or to 0% (pause pension withdrawal). Such changes can be implemented no earlier than the month after you applied for a change.

If you have a withdrawal rate between 20 and 80% at the age of 67, you must actively apply to change the withdrawal rate to 100. You will not automatically receive 100% of the old-age pension at the age of 67, even though 67 is the normal retirement age.

Choice of withdrawal time - higher pension the longer you wait

Your annual pension is calculated from how old you are when you choose to take out a pension, and the expected life expectancy for your age cohort. The longer you wait before drawing an old-age pension, the higher the annual pension paid out. Please note that early withdrawal of pension will give you a lower paid pension per month. Early withdrawal means that you spread your accrued pension over several years and thus receive less payment each year. In order for you to have the option of early withdrawal, your calculated pension at the age of 67 must be at least as large as your age cohort's minimum pension. This means that not everyone is entitled to early withdrawal, precisely because it should not be possible to end up with a smaller paid pension at the age of 67 than what you would have been paid on the minimum pension.

It is important to note that the minimum pension is a variable term, and it depends on the total period of social security coverage. The fixed state minimum pension applies to persons with 40 years of Norwegian social security periods. If your social security period is less than 40 years, the minimum pension level will be calculated proportionally in relation to the number of years you have been insured in Norway.
